

What's Safe and What's a No-Go for Your Pup's Plate?

These Are a Total Go

- | | | | | | | |
|-------------|----------------|--------------|--------------------|---------------|--------------|--------------|
| Pork | Shrimp | Turkey | A lean cut of beef | cooked salmon | Cooked Eggs | Oatmeal |
| Cucumbers | Carrots | Celery | Peppers | Bananas | Strawberries | Blackberries |
| Blueberries | Sweet Potatoes | Corn kernels | Pineapple | Watermelon | Apples | Rice |

Snack Smart: Tiny Bites are Alright

- | | | | | | |
|---------|---------|--------|----------|-------------|---------------|
| Salt | Cheese | Milk | Tuna | Salami | Peanut Butter |
| Honey | Dates | Bread | Tomatoes | Broccoli | Orange |
| Peaches | Avocado | Lychee | Cherries | Pomegranate | Coconut |

Paws Off: Dangerous Dining

- | | | | |
|-------------------------------|--------------|-----------|-----------------------|
| Alcohol | Coffee & Tea | Chocolate | Grapes & Raisins |
| Cannabis products (Marijuana) | Garlic | Onions | Artificial sweeteners |

Print it out, stick it near, keep your pet in the clear.

If your dog eats something dangerous from the list, contact the clinic or emergency center right away. Give them three key details: your dog's weight, the type of food eaten (if possible, keep the label), and the estimated quantity. With this information, they can advise if immediate medical attention is needed or if home monitoring is enough.